US Finance Minister: African tour to counter Chinese influence

According to AfricaNews, US Finance Minister, Janet Yellen, flew for an 11-day visit to several African countries to strengthen ties with the United States on a continent where China has become a major player. As China and Russia aim to gain an influence in Africa, the United States find themselves in a defensive position. During her stay in Africa, Janet Yellen will highlight American efforts to strengthen partnerships with African countries, strengthen economic ties and meet with several senior officials.

Egyptian pound hits record low against US dollar

According to AfricaNews, Egypt's currency plummeted to a record low against the US dollar as the country continues to battle surging inflation. Decisions from the country's Central Bank to raise the main interest rate and devalue the Egyptian pound have set off an economic shock that has affected millions of residents. AfricaNews claims that the measures were meant to fight increasing prices and meet the requirements of the International Monetary Fund for a bailout loan amid a shortage of foreign currency. To offset the effect on Egyptian residents, the IMF has approved a $3 Billion dollar support package for Egypt.

AI Revolution May Change the Face of Zimbabwe Economy

Taedzwa Chikono from AllAfrica shares that as artificial intelligence technologies like Chat GPT (Generative Pre-training Transformer) become more widely adopted, there is growing concern about the potential impact on employment in various industries. In Zimbabwe, Chat GPT is likely to have significant implications for the economy as a whole, with potential impacts on a range of sectors, like the technology sector, for example. As well as a threat, AllAfrica shares that it could also be a major asset for businesses in Zimbabwe. Chat GPT could be used to analyze customer data and develop better strategies for their products and services.

ICC's African arbitration ambition

Andrew Mizner from African Law and Business writes, the ICC International Court of Arbitration has set its sights on African commercial disputes, promising to include local voices, rather than impose another foreign institution on the continent. Following the celebration of its centenary, the global arbitral institution plans to become a major presence on a continent which has historically been neglected, at least in comparison with Europe and the Americas. From 2020 to 2021, there was a 13% increase in African parties using ICC arbitration, a 166% increase in their use of mediation and a 50% increase in the use of ICC expertise. The current president reports that the ICC has been embraced by the African legal community and she hopes African countries will feel supported from the ICC in return.

Compliance and the power of automation

According to Torben Sauer from African Law and Business, “for trade finance banks across the globe, keeping abreast of evolving compliance and legal standards surrounding anti-money laundering (AML), sanctions, fraud and other considerations is an ongoing challenge.” Sauer, CEO of Conpend, explains that digital technologies hold immense transformative potential for the trade finance industry, which remains largely paper based. Automation could be the answer by utilizing artificial intelligence (AI) and machine learning (ML) automation software to perform document checks, financial institutions can capitalize on numerous benefits, including improved efficiency, as well as cost and risk reduction.
